Public education

Problem | Youngsters congregate at void decks, generating loud noises when drinking after 10.30pm. Noise makers tend to shift activities from block to block whenever they receive complaints.

Solution | Put up posters to remind residents of the need to lower volume during quiet hours. The poster should also signal the potential negative consequences by including image of police man, pointing towards the noise makers and directing them to socialise at nearby parks after 10.30pm. Posters to accompany with mock (or possibly real) surveillance to serve as deterrence.

Public education

- Problem | Rowdy boys from neighbouring blocks congregate at the void deck to drink, smoke and yell (especially under influence of alcohol). Drinking continues even after the stipulated time at 10pm.
- Solution | Put up standees of 4 languages to remind residents of the need to lower volume during quiet hours. The poster should be kept simple with minimal words, but should signal potential negative consequences by including image of the police or jail. Standees to accompany with mock (or possibly real) surveillance to serve as deterrence.

Public education

Problem | Sports activities such as group exercise classes conducted at various times of the day and youngster playing basketball late in the evening impacted residents staying at nearby blocks.

Solution | Put up 3D figurines at the park, holding decibel reader + LED panel. Once noise level exceeds 70db during quiet hours, the figurine will light up and a message will appear on the LED reader showing: "Quiet hours is in effect, please lower your volume". Accompany with life-sized standees to promote mutual understanding between park users and residents.

Repurposing common space

Problem | Congregation by teenagers at the void deck, drinking from afternoon to early morning in the following day. Typically different groups of teenagers, they tend to congregate there as it is a nice and breezy area.

Solution | Repurpose void deck into a community library. To include books that are friendly to all age groups (child, adult, elderly) and aim to seek donations from NLB/residents. Fencing will be required for the library compound.

Public education + Repurposing common space

Problem | Complaints on dragging of furniture after 10pm and congregation at the void decks.

Solution | Public education messages to be displayed on digital notice board inside the lifts. In addition, repurpose void deck into a Resource Centre which will include a community library and activities for preschool kids, seniors and stay-in residents, e.g. multi-generation knitting sessions. Will also incorporate talks / sharing sessions to raise awareness of neighbour noise norms, guidelines and other neighbourly / municipal issues
